

Yes. Broadband access is critical to the continued success of the Internet, as a business and personal resource. Cable modems should be encouraged, and customers should have choice in providers.